Valley Grove Nutrition Board honors volunteers and celebrates 16th year

by Lisa Parsons

The volunteers who help keep the Valley Grove Nutrition Project running smoothly were honored April 17th as part of the Board's 16th Anniversary celebration.

The Nutrition Board was founded by five community groups, Kiwanis Club of Spring Valley, Lemon Grove Congregational United Church of Christ, Soroptimist International of Lemon Grove, Kiwanis Club of Lemon Grove and Lemon Grove United Methodist Church, in response to the needs of senior citizens in the area. The Project provides well-balanced, hot meals to seniors at nutrition centers in Spring Valley and Lemon Grove, in addition to home delivered meals for those who are unable to visit the centers or prepare meals for themselves. Seniors also enjoy activities, guest speakers games and entertainment at the centers.

The "Memory Lane Dancers," all of whom were in their 60s, provided entertainment for the 16th Anniversary Celebration. Guests and honorees were delighted by the entertainers' singing and dancing, often singing along with the classic tunes such as "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" performed in Padre uniforms.

After the entertainment, community volunteer organizations who help prepare and serve the food at both the Spring Valley and Lemon Grove sites were honored. Those groups were: The Catholic Daughters, Kiwanis of Lemon Grove, Lemon Grove Lutheran Church, Lemon Grove Congregational United Church of Christ, Ladies of Columbus, Lemon Grove United Methodist Church, First Baptist Church of Lemon Grove, St. John of the Cross and the Rotary Club.

The next group of volunteers to be honored were the people who deliver meals to homebound seniors, many of them work and deliver the meals on their own lunch breaks. These dedicated people are: Blanche Quist, Lorna Neuhaus, Wini Huff, Emily Radi, Lloyd Radi, Edgar Savory, Tara Prater, Elisa Gonzalez, Daniel Gonzalez, Sherry Lyall, Ernie Peru, Jodi Waller, Guy Rueger, Olli Lowe, Birger Haugdahl, Delores Conrad, Sue Bardsley, Mary Martinez, John Martinez and Al Hiner.

Volunteers honored for over 100 hours of service at the nutrition sites were: Bertha Box, Stella John, Donald Lockwood, Jean Marino, Lloyd Radi and Emily Radi. People who had racked up over 150 hours were: Charlotte Gates, Mary Martinez, Frances Rowley, Rose Pecoraro, Tony Pecoraro and Charlie Shepley.

Mayor Pro-Tem Lois Heiserman presented awards to volunteers who had over 200 hours of service saying they were "the backbone of the Nutrition Program." Wageania Hulse, Doris Kennedy, Mary Montgomery, Lou Nagy, Rush Rowley, Peg Rosenberger and Art Woodcoch all donated over 200 hours of their time to the project.

Peg Rosenberger was singled out for her more than 382 hours of work and honored with the Mildred Huebsch Award and a Nutrition Volunteer of the Year Award from a representative of Supervisor Bailey's office. The husband and wife team, Daniel and Elisa Gonzalez, who deliver home delivered meals "to people who really need that special touch" received the Carl Ferguson Award, presented by Heiserman. A staff member who had been with the project since August of 1978, Dorothy Monacelli, was also recognized for her dedication.

All of the awards were presented with much affection and many hugs and kisses. Heiserman summed up the day with, "Lemon Grove is not only noted for The best climate on earth, I guarantee it's noted for the best volunteers on earth."

Old Time Days planners are busy

Planning for Old Time Days is in full swing and it looks like it will be another fun-filled weekend.

The festivities kick-off Friday, May 11 with the Chamber of Commerce Old Time Days Costume Contest. Judging by qualified individuals such as Colleen Ruis from Letter-Kraft Printing; Joyce Lazok, Executive Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce and Firemen Rosenberger, Harper and Mullins, will take place between 10 a.m. and noon. Contestants who are vying for 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes are Empire Beauty Supply, City Hall, Country Hills Residential Retirement Center, Grove Office Supply, Grove Pastry Shop, San Diego Trust & Savings Bank and Union Bank. Other firms are encouraged to enter. The prizes will be presented at 2 p.m. by Miss Lemon Grove, Wendy Bailey.

Friday evening will feature a Bar-B-Q dinner by the Lemon Grove Firefighters. "The food is fabulous," said Erica Aldrich, "Last year it was so good they ran out of food." The Bar-B-Q will be followed by a dance for the whole family from 7:30 to 10 p.m. featuring the Cat-illacs, a rock and roll band specializing in songs of the 50s and 60s. Finally, the night sky will be lit up with a dazzling fireworks display.

Saturday starts with a pancake breakfast served by the Lemon Grove Kiwanis, followed by the re-opening of the Old Time Faire, with displays, arts and crafts, food and game booths for the family. Twelve non-profit organizations will man food booths ranging from hot dogs, ice cream and cotton candy, to margaritas, beer and pizza.

The 27th annual parade begins at 11 a.m. and this year's Grand Marshalls are Hudson and Bauer of KFMB. Also, a couple who has given a lot to the community of Lemon Grove, Bob and Katie Guest, will act as Honorary Grand Marshalls. "It's our way of saying 'Thank you!' for everything they've done," said John Pipes, parade coordinator. The parade will begin on Broadway near St. John of the Cross and head west until it hits Lemon Grove Avenue, it will then turn South and head down Lemon Grove Avenue, right along the Faire area, finishing at Montana. "We had to change the parade route because of the Trolley," said Pipes. Some of the highlights of the parade will be Lemon Grove Middle School Band, Mt. Miguel High School Band, Marine Corps Recruit Depot Band, Marine Color Guard from Barstow and The Fairest of the Fair Beauty queens. Pipes said he could still use some volunteers to help the day of the parade, so if you're ready willing and able, call Pipes at 466-6229.

Don't miss out on the fun and excitement of Old Time Days!

Historical Society to elect officers and hear council candidates at next meeting

The regular meeting of the Lemon Grove Historical Society will be Thursday May 3rd, 1:30 p.m. in the community room of the library. After the usual short business session two special events will take place. First will be the yearly elections. Nominated for 90/91 office are: Pete Smith, president; 1st Vice President in charge of programming, Eva Berry; 2nd Vice-President in charge of membership, Betty Hunter; Secretary will need to be nominated from the floor; John Davis, Treasurer; Naoma Faucher, Museum Director; and Don Heyser, Historian. All positions are open to additional nominations from the floor. Those elected will be installed during the June monthly meeting.

Since elections for city council members are also coming up the Society has invited those running for council to speak after the group's election. Both newcomers and incumbents will be given approximately 5 minutes to give their backgrounds, a little of their Lemon Grove history, and future aspirations. A short question period may follow, but it's not intended to be a full blown political discussion.

Come meet the candidates in this friendly atmosphere.

Refreshments will be served afterwards, and the public is welcome. For further information contact Pete Smith at 463-7292.

MS exercise class offered

People with multiple sclerosis may sign up for an exercise class designed specifically for their needs. The MS exercise class, taught by physical therapists on Grossmont Hospital's staff, is the first of its kind in the county.

Participants learn stretching and strengthening movements for tone reduction and control.

"It is important for multiple sclerosis patients to exercise," says Lisa Huber, clinical supervisor of physical therapy at the hospital. "Exercising helps to maintain their strength, and that results in maintaining their current level of functioning." Being part of an organized class provides support from other MS patients, who have encountered some of the same difficulties, says Huber. "Being with the other class members gives then the incentive to stay in an ongoing program," she adds.

Anyone interested in signing up for an MS exercise class at the Grossmont Rehabilitation Center should call 589-4100 for the dates and time of the next six-week series of classes.

Water saving programs begun

Directors of the Metropolitan Water District have launched a special $10 million rebate program designed to encourage retail water agencies to cut water use this summer.

"This program is part of a major effort by Metropolitan and other Southern California agencies to reduce water consumption by 10 percent in response to California's continuing drought," Metropolitan General Manager Carl Boronkay said.

"Unlike some areas of the state, Southland residents have not yet suffered water shortages. However, available supplies are inadequate to meet all of the region's needs.

"By voluntarily reducing water use now, we can help avoid possible rationing next year by leaving conserved water in storage in reservoirs and groundwater basins. That water will be invaluable should the drought continue into 1991," Boronkay said.

In other drought-related actions Metropolitan's board:

--agreed to use district facilities to provide water to drought-stricken portions of Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties whenever capacity is available to do so.

--approved joint participation with the City of Los Angeles in a $2.2 million program to retrofit 100,000 homes with low-flow shower heads and other water-saving hardware.

--allocated $500,000 for the purchase of water conservation kits which will be distributed to consumers by retail water agencies and other means.

--doubled the district's financial participation in local water reclamation projects in Southern California.

--supported pending legislation, SB 1520 by Sen. Robert Presley, D-Riverside, which would provide tax credits for the installation of ultra-low-volume toilets in residential dwellings.

Boronkay said Southern California's growing population is pushing the region's need for water higher while dependable supplies are being reduced.

"Metropolitan's historic deliveries from the Colorado River will be curtailed for the first time this year to accommodate higher usage by Arizona, and the city of Los Angeles' aqueduct will provide only a fraction of the water it normally does," Boronkay said.

"While the State Water Project is expected to make full deliveries to Southern California this year, agricultural agencies that rely on that system face 50 percent shortages," Boronkay said. "Should the drought continue into 1991, Southern California's state project supplies also could be curtailed, leaving the region substantially short of necessary supplies."

Boronkay said the district's previously approved $2 million conservation advertising program for television and radio is expected to generate about a five percent reduction in water used this summer, or about 100,000 acre-feet. An acre-foot is 326,000 gallons, or about the amount needed to meet the needs of two typical homes if landscape irrigation is taken into consideration.

Boronkay said Metropolitan hopes to supplement these savings by an additional 100,000 acre-feet by providing $100 rebate for each acre-foot of water the district's member agencies can conserve above the five percent amount.

Metropolitan, through its 27 member public agencies, provides about half of the water used by 15 million people living in Ventura,

Mt. Miguel photographers excel

by Elizabeth Douglass

Mt. Miguel High School swept the photography awards at the Third Annual Grossmont District Wide Art Competition award ceremony held at the East County Performing Arts Center in El Cajon on April 1st.

Michele Apida, a senior, captured first place with a cash prize of $150. She also tied for Honorable mention. Michele sold one of her two prize winning photographs to Robert Flan, the sponsor, and one of the judges of the art competition for $75. Laura Huntimer won second place ($100), and Evaristo Lopez III won third place ($75).

Out of the thirty-five entries from Mt. Miguel, twenty-eight have been selected to be displayed at the East County Performing Arts Center until April 28.

"I am very proud of all the photography students, many of whom have entered competitions this year," says Eileen Mandell, the photography teacher at Mt. Miguel. "Their dedication and creativity helped them excel in both the San Diego Museum of Art juried show and the Grossmont District wide competition."

Additional monies were donated to the competition by the Lemon Grove Rotary Club.

Water shortage here to stay

There would seem to be no doubting anymore that the prolonged drought throughout California has placed Southern California in general and San Diego in particular, on the brink of a permanent change in lifestyle. The media is awash in stories about water shortage and plans to cut back on usage. There is even a certain excitement and "stiff upper lip" quality to our plans to cut back on washing pavements, filling pools and taking long showers. These requirements of the Stage II, 10% reduction in water usage will get us through the summer. But what then?

Our experts tell us, and we have no reason to doubt them, that even several seasons of above average rain will not fully relieve the local drought conditions. They also tell us that our Colorado River water entitlement is being steadily reduced by increased Los Angeles and Arizona use. This should continue into the future, until we are receiving less than half of what we received in the late 80s. In short, we face a future of severely curtailed and carefully expended water availability.

Lest we think that this is some still distant bogeyman, created simply to make us a little more careful, we should look north to Santa Barbara and Marin Counties where water shortage is making profound changes in the way the residents live.

There are several obvious things that must be done. The various Stage II restrictions are a start and will serve to ease a bit of the current problem. But in a larger sense, all of us must begin to develop a mindset that accepts the coming shortage as real. Unless our thinking about water is future oriented and planful, we will become like Aesops grasshopper who danced the summer away while the ants prepared for the winter. We must utilize whatever tools are available --tools such as reduced spray shower heads and water saving toilet tank blocks, and make them a permanent part of our usage.

There is help on the way in the future. Ocean desalinization is being studied and pumping stations and ducts are being planned and built to carry more northern water to this area. But these are still far away and even Northern California watersheds are depleted at this time. There will be no white-hatted hero riding miraculously to the rescue of Southern California. If we are to maintain much of our prized lifestyle, we, with our own planning, will have to be the heroes.

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges The Charger Draft

A new voice is speaking for the San Diego Chargers and the hope is that the change in spokesman will change the fortunes of a team that, for the last seven years, seemed committed to mediocrity.

Alex Spanos took the team over back then and among the first things he did was to make coaching uncomfortable for Don Coryell. Coryell left and with him went an offense that gave the Chargers the only playing respectability they had. With Dan Fouts at the controls, "Air Coryell" struck fear into the hearts of defensive coordinators throughout the National Football League.

Defense was more than a problem then. It was practically non-existent. Scores literally went off the scoreboard. The totals rivaled National Basketball Association scores.

Spanos, with all the wisdom of a very rich man playing with a new toy, and with the advice of a dedicated arch enemy and carpetbag rival owner, began tinkering with the defensive game plan by dumping the greatest offensive coach high-stakes football has ever known. Spanos followed that up by taking on the arch rival carpet bag owner's special assistant, Steve Ortmayer, as general manager.

Among his first successes, Ortmayer traded pro bowler Jim Lachey to his former team for an overweight and often injured tackle John Clay and running back Napoleon McCallum, who already had an iron clad contract with the United States Navy.

Spanos then employed Dan Henning to run the show as head coach and approachable spokesman. Henning proved to be both honest and available. One may not like his answers, but he answered questions or told you he wouldn't.

As the air seemed to clear, Jim McMahon was brought in from Chicago to quarterback the Chargers. McMahon proved to be the same chip on his shoulder, smart mouth, stern end of a Clydesdale he was during his "Holiday Bowl" interviews ten years ago.

Henning's approachability and Charger openness lost considerable ground when McMahon embarked on a season long diatribe against San Diego beat writers, and Henning closed practices and worked out the team in stealth uniforms.

Finally Spanos took on Bobby Beathard as total talent chief of the Chargers, and promised not to hamper his command. In one half-hour general interview with Beathard, more information was discussed and more openness was experienced by San Diego media than they had collectively received in all the Spanos years.

Beathard took the Chargers through his first draft and came away looking like an honest man. He strengthened the strongest part of the Charger game with his first pick. He added "blue chipper" line backer Junior Seau to the awesome force of Les O'Neal, Billy Ray Smith and Gary Plummer in the 3-4 Charger lineup that includes last year's top pick Burt Grossman, who plays down lineman like a line backer. That's real awesomeness.

With Beathard running the show, can open practices and some professional respect to media members be possible? Let's hope so.

To the Editor:

I have been following the news accounts of the anniversary of Earth Day with special interest because working with the earth is my life. I work in the mining industry.

As attention is being given to environmental issues, we all should be aware of what the earth does for us. Most people outside of my industry don't realize how much we depend directly on the earth for the necessities of life.

They told us in science class that there are only three kinds of matter: animal, vegetable and mineral. As you look around your home or office, if what you see hasn't been grown, then it comes from a hole in the ground.

According to national statistics, every single person in America requires production of 40,000 pounds of new minerals each year.

Our fireproof "sheetrock" walls are made of gypsum, which comes right out of a mine. Everything from the foundations of our homes to the tallest skyscrapers rests on concrete, which is mined limestone clay, iron ore and gypsum, plus huge amounts of sand and gravel to make concrete. Think of the iron in cars and bridges. Coal and other fuel minerals provide power and heat.

Most people don't realize that the bright yellow contacts in the modular plugs on computers and telephones contain gold--and there is a lot of gold in the circuitry of those machines. There is gold in arthritis medicine, in space equipment and vital defense systems, among a long list of other uses.

We've had to make a lot of changes in the last 20 years to meet environmental requirements. We have shown we can take care of the environment and maintain production. We think individuals and business people should be able to make similar sacrifices to help assure a better future environment.

The earth has been good to us. We need to be good to the earth.

Sincerely, J.L. Lester

Unsolicited litter

"Hats Off" to a civic minded man named Austin Felden who had the guts to take the bull by the horns and do something about our "unsolicited litter" problem which appeared in the April 12th issue of the Lemon Grove Review.

An El Cajon based 'freebie" newspaper, which will remain unnamed, has littered our well-kept local communities for many years.

A car whizzes by, tossing out the unwanted parcel with the accuracy of a blind fullback, sometimes under my car, sometimes atop of my car, sometimes in the bushes, sometimes missing our yard completely. When we take our vacations and are gone from home for a few days the twice-a-week fish wrapper or bird cage liner has nearly covered our property.

How do you stop the delivery of something you do not want and did not order? There must be a hidden ordinance somewhere.

Another one of my pet "Litter Peeves" is concerning the very frequent and popular yard sales. We have had several at our yard and have wondered if it is at all worth the effort involved. We spend a week getting the junk sorted and priced, make and put up signs around the neighborhood, work two long days trying to practically give the stuff away and then end up boxing it all up for the Goodwill Industries.

We work long and hard to put on a yard sale, but other "salers" aren't quite so energetic. They put up lots of signs in the immediate area on anything that will hold a sign but never bother to retrieve them after the sale. The ugly, poorly made signs not only litter but sure do confuse the public. An ordinance should be enacted to cite the offenders not only for putting up the unsightly eye-sores but also for not taking them down immediately after the sale.

A lot of our present day litter and pollution problems stem from the new generation of "most convenient way of living" people. Just plain lazy is the real description.

I guess that I'm just as guilty as the next guy in this new world of easy living, so we'll just have to suffer and pay for our modern way of life.

Letters

Dear Editor:

The upcoming election will present the voters throughout the county of San Diego a chance to elect the chief law enforcement officer of our county, the Sheriff. As a fifteen year member of the Sheriff's Department, I have a vested interest in this election. So too, do the citizens. Unfortunately, the headlines continue to focus on the current Sheriff, as opposed t looking to the future to a new Sheriff. A recent phone poll conducted by the Deputy Sheriff's Association bears this fact out. The citizens are not informed on the candidates. From the standpoint of one of the employees of the Sheriff's Department that works patrol, I would like to express my thoughts on the issue.

The San Diego Sheriff's Department encompasses a myriad o internal components ranging from the back country Resident Deputy to the Star Wars technology of the computer generated Crime Analysis Unit. The Department is comprised of sworn personnel, as well as civilian employees, Reserves, and volunteers by the hundreds. We've got resources that range from horses, ATV vehicles, Bomb robots, all the way to the jet helicopters. But it's the people that make this Department so unique, and unfortunately at this present point of time, we are experiencing approximately a 14% attrition rate. To put it bluntly, there is not enough time to educate someone from the outside via OJT (On the Job Training) on how to operate this vast law enforcement operation.

If you accept that premise, that we need to elect a Sheriff who can immediately step into the pressure spot and deal effectively with the problems at hand, then we have two choices for the next Sheriff of San Diego; Assistant Sheriff Jack Drown or Captain Jim Roache.

Now I ask you to consider this. The Sheriff's Department, like any other progressive law enforcement agency, is actually a big business type enterprise. We have budgets to deal with, personnel to manage, a product to administer to, and resources to daily evaluate and alter if the need arises. Today's top level police managers ar just that, managers. They are sent to prestigious upper level management fields of education to learn new and improved techniques on running the modern day law enforcement agency. In this manner, we, the tax payers, get more for our buck.

I will vote for Jack Drown. He is a graduate of the FBI national Academy, the police Executive Research Forum Senior Management Institute, and the California Board of Corrections Standards & Training Jail Management Class. But more importantly, he gets along well with the Board of Supervisors, as well as members of the press. This last fact will help to return this Department to smooth running waters, so those of us on the line can devote more attention to catching the sharks that feed on the victims.

Editor:

Money, Money, Money... That seems to be the song being sung by Jack Drown who is running for Sheriff of this County and is endorsed by Duffy who sang the same tune for too long. Well, gentlemen, the needle is stuck on a record that needs to be broken. We the taxpayers have faced the music long enough. We need someone who truly has budget experience and knows how to prioritize. Jim Roache has my vote of confidence.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Lisa

Lisa (Staci Keanan) is your average teenage girl: precocious, hyper and crazy about boys. The problem is, her mother Katherine (Cheryl Ladd) had a less than perfect youth, eventually becoming pregnant with Lisa at a young age and fears her daughter may take the same path. Lisa is forbidden to date until she is 16, only two years away, but it seems a lifetime. So being the resourceful flirt that she is, Lisa manages to test out her sex appeal with older men. She and her best friend Wendy (Tanya Fenmore) track down "beautiful guys" and take their pictures, filling a scrapbook up with their names, addresses and phone numbers-kind of a hunk hall of fame.

This game seems innocent enough until Lisa becomes attached to Richard (D.W. Moffett) a restaurant manager who, despite his charm and grace, is secretly the infamous "candlelight killer." Lisa flirts with him over the phone, he eventually wants to meet her and knowing that can never be, she arranges for Richard to meet her mother. I think you can guess what happens next.

Director Gary Sherman's new suspense-thriller is above average, and it does have it moments of sheer terror. The final confrontation between Lisa, Katherine and the killer is excellent moviemaking, but Sherman takes forever getting there. The first hour of the film is far too slow and the screenplay, by Sherman and Karen Clark, is filled with Lisa and Wendy's "cute" teenage banter. When I hear an hour of "like, I can't believe it," "oh, I'm so sure," and "mommy, you're so mean," it makes me want to...you know, like, gag on a spoon.

Cheryl Ladd is good as Katherine, although she hasn't perfected the confused mother routine as well as old pro's like Teri Garr and D.W. Moffett may give you the chills one or twice. Staci Keanan shows promise in this, her motion picture debut, but still needs time to develop as an actress. She was on the television travesty "My Two Dads" for so long that "charming grin" should be listed on her resume. The real joy in the cast is Tanya Fenmore as Wendy. She adds a hint of cynicism to the sometimes stupid dialogue and manages to be charming, even though trapped in a stereotype.

The great mystery of "Lisa," however, is not even in the movie. It's the rating: PG-13, supposedly suitable for 13-year-olds. That would be O.K. if it wasn't for the last scene - a climatic battle with knives, mace, body blows and baseball bats; everything a young teen needs to grow up socially responsible.

Waterwise gardening videos available as gift of Helix Water

In honor of Earth Day, copies of the Sunset video on drought-tolerant landscaping, "Waterwise Gardening--Beautiful Gardens with Less Water," have been donated to area libraries by Helix Water District. The 32-minute, color video gives suggestions on what to plant and how to set up "microclimates" to use water wisely in landscaping.

"We feel this video reaffirms the Earth Day message of using resources wisely," said Harold Ball, president of the Helix Water District Board of Directors. "Not everybody realizes that almost half the water utilized at their homes is used outside. If each of us just planted a small portion of our yards with drought-tolerant plants instead of grass, the water savings would be significant."

The videos will be available to all library users in the Helix Water District. When checking out the video, you may request a free copy of a colorful brochure that accompanies the video. When you live in a near-desert community, it makes sense to plant for wise water use and beauty. Check it out!

Free child ID program "Print-A-Kid" offered at Grossmont Center

Parents who wish to obtain an official record of their children's fingerprints and photographic likeness, free of charge, may do so at Grossmont Center, May 5-6, where the La Mesa Kiwanis Club will conduct its "Print-A-Kid" program, for the seventh consecutive year, in conjunction with the La Mesa Police Reserve.

The "Print-A-Kid" program, will be at the mall, in front of Fox Photo's One Hour Lab, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, and Noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Fox will be providing the photography and parents can have their photographs in about one hour.

In many cases "Print-A-Kid" provides parents with the only official record they have of their child's fingerprints and photographic likeness. "Because so many kids are abducted without parents having a record of their children," says Bob Battenfield of the La Mesa Kiwanis Club, "we are fulfilling a need."

Last year, 420 children received identification cards. "Because this is such an invaluable service for our community's families, we hope to see that number increase this year," said Carol Landis, Marketing Director for Grossmont Center.

Traditionally, parents bring their toddlers to get fingerprinted, but there are no age limitations and teenagers who wish to participate in the program may do so on their own.

Hiking hearing

The proposed development of a network of regional riding and hiking trails will be discussed at a public hearing of the San Diego County Board of Supervisors on Wednesday, May 2 at 10 a.m. in Room 310 of the County Administrative Center. The hearing was rescheduled from April 25.

According to County Public Works Director Granville M. Bowman, staff will present a plan to design quality riding and hiking trails for the region and recommend the development of a map detailing the proposed trail system.

After considering a preliminary report on regional riding and hiking trails last October, Supervisors directed staff to meet with governmental agencies in adjacent counties where similar programs have been developed.

Sagger art

Frank Sundstrom, Grossmont College graduate and ECPAC employee, has been giving a new wrinkle to an old art form. Sagger is the technique of wrapping a paper bag around a ceramic piece before firing it in a kiln: Sundstrom has taken that process one step beyond the norm.

Sagger takes on new life when Sundstrom wraps his work in newsprint, magazines, even banana peels. According to Sundstrom, "Soviet Life Works Best." Peristroika aside, the results are unique. Some pieces have a rough, yet delicate, look while others are smooth and colorful. Sundstrom's work has met rave reviews at ceramics shows as far off as Durango, Colorado. Sundstrom's art will be on exhibit, a collection of lithographs, ceramics, and drawings, at the ECPAC June 2nd through August 6th.

It's The Law

by Denise Polito
Attorney at Law

Question: What legal steps can I take to prepare for loss of mental capacity as a result of a progressive disease (such as Alzheimer's Disease), unconsciousness or some other condition?

Answer: Decisions made with respect to loss of capacity fall within two categories: Those affecting your health (which relate to food, clothing, shelter and medical attention) and those affecting your financial affairs. This article will discuss health care decisions: the article appearing next week will discuss financial decisions.

Several documents may be executed to set forth your intentions with respect to health care. The first, a Directive to Physicians (or "Living Will") directs your doctor to withhold life-sustaining procedures. This statutory document (valid for five years) will be the most helpful to your physician and family if you supply them with a copy in advance. Although the document is given the most respect when the signor has a terminal illness, it may also be honored in medical situations not involving terminal illness.

The second document, a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care, authorizes someone else (your appointed agent) to make health care decisions for you if you are unable to make them yourself. The terms of the document vary, but they often permit the signor to set forth his or her desires on many subjects, including autopsies, life-sustaining treatment, anatomical gifts and burial instructions. Again, a copy of the document should be given in advance to your physician, agent and family for referral in emergency situations. A Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care (valid for up to seven years) should contain specific wording to insure that the power continues after your incapacity. Used in conjunction with the Directive to Physicians, you may obtain a wide range of control over your medical situation.

The third document you may execute is a nomination of the conservator of the person. a conservatorship is not in your best interest. In the same manner, you may designate a guardian for your minor child or children. A conservator may even be nominated in a durable Power of Attorney for Health Care.

Finally, you may wish to prepay your funeral expenses, limit the expenses of your burial, request cremation or designate a burial place. These desires should be set forth in writing in either a letter to your children (or executor) or in a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care. AS a general rule, burial instructions should not appear in your Will unless your relatives are notified of your instructions. This insures that your instructions will be carried out since your Will may not be immediately available for relatives to consult (especially if you keep your Will in your safe deposit box).

Use of more than one document is often required. In such a case, care should be taken to insure the directions and terms are consistent.

Training for talented musicians available in Lemon Grove

by Lisa Parsons

Talented youngsters who need that extra training to reach their full musical potential need go no further than Lemon Grove.

The Academy of Musical Arts, located at the corner of Palm and Lemon Grove Avenue, was founded by Eileen Moss, a former choral teacher with the San Diego Unified School District. "The whole idea of the Academy was to provide quality instruction to a segment of the community who might not otherwise get it," said Moss. She and seven other instructors designed a summer enrichment program for the San Diego Unified School District in 1987. After the summer was over, Moss and her colleagues decided to continue without the school district and occupied a series of locations until settling in Lemon Grove last October.

All of the instructors teach privately and Moss said they are basically volunteering their time at the Academy because she cannot afford to pay them "anywhere near what they earn in private lessons."

The Academy has a scholarship program for low-income students who would not ordinarily be able to afford quality training. Scholarship students are required to stay with the Academy for one year and pay at least a small portion of their tuition.

"I see so many things happening with kids today and I think this program can be very beneficial," said Moss. "We work on all the things that build character--discipline, commitment and teach kids that they need to work for what they want."

Academy of Musical Arts student, Fahloh Nee, accompanied by her mother, Fanny Reeves, was awarded a scholarship by San Diego Women's Club.

The Academy offers instruction in: violin- taught by Randall Brinton, who plays with the San Diego Symphony; violoncello- taught by Glen Campbell, who also plays with the San Diego Symphony; voice- taught by Eileen Moss who has appeared in concerts with the Metropolitan Opera of New York and the San Diego Symphony; piano taught by Kryzysztof Brzuza and theory- taught by Suzanne Jones.

When a student who has unusual talent or ability completes his courses at the Academy, said Moss, he will qualify for a conservatory. She said several of the Academy's students have pursued professional careers and two of her students won auditions with the New York City Metropolitan Opera.

The Academy is planning a summer program designed to be an enrichment experience for local youngsters. The first session begins June 28 and the second session starts July 9. Each session can accommodate up to 60 children from 9-12 a.m. and will cost $45.
